POINTS

“The advantage of tasting wine blind is that star power has no effect. So, while some people will buy this simply because it comes from the estate that Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie own in Correns, just north of Brignoles in Provence, our panel recommended it because it’s graceful and firm, a rosé with conviction. The fruit feels diaphanous, allowing a clear view to the chalky minerality that runs through the wine; the acidity feels vibrant, extending the flavors and whetting the palate for another sip. It’s made in conjunction with the Famille Perrin, in their facilities.”
